

Which flights are available for my shipment? Has the shipment been loaded? Has the plane taken off with my shipment? . These are questions a forwarder asks himself daily. And how do the forwarders get the answers to these questions? They mostly phone or fax the airline they are sending the shipment with. By using the internet, these questions can be answered quickly, at no cost and from the comfort of the office thanks to TRAXON WEB, the tool for status updates and flight schedule information.

TRAXON WEB

Status and Schedules on the Web

TRAXON WEB was developed and launched to make it easier for air cargo partners to access flight schedules and shipment status updates. The basis was to use the Internet, therefore requiring the user only to have an Internet connection and a web browser in order to access multiple airlines from one site. What was even more attractive to the users was the fact that the use of the service was free of charge. Today TRAXON WEB has been redesigned and relaunched in conjunction with the brand new TRAXON Website which has been online since February 2002.

The tool offers 2 distinct services with 25 Airlines:

- Airline Flight Schedules
- Shipment Status Updates
